

6 January, 2011

Earl Howe today welcomes the new Association of Dental Groups

Earl Howe, Minister responsible for dentistry, has expressed his strong support for the newly formed Association of Dental Groups (ADG).

He said;

"Increased investment in NHS dentistry will be critical to the success of our proposals for a new dental contract and I recognise the contribution that dental corporate bodies are making to improvements in premises and facilities."

ADG is a trade association whose members are corporate dentistry providers and dentistry groups serving both private and NHS patients across the UK. The association supports the Government's aim to improve high quality access to dental care and will work with the NHS and the profession as a whole to improve patient care.