

The Dentists' Health Support Trust Needs You

In the event that a dentist needs a helping hand in overcoming addiction or mental health issues, there is help available thanks to the Dentists' Health Support Trust (DHST).

Like other organisations within the dental sphere, the Trust relies entirely on the generosity of the profession for its funding.

One of the establishments that has taken an active role in providing monetary support is the Association of Dental Groups (ADG). "At the ADG, we are very much aware of the importance of providing support to dentists in need," says David Worskett, the Chairman of the ADG. "That is why we will continue to assist the Trust as much as we can, and we encourage others, where possible, to do the same.

"While addiction isn't a prevalent problem in the profession, it is important that a service is available, even if it serves just one person."

If you would like to make a donation, get in touch with DHST today.

For more information about the ADG visit www.dentalgroups.co.uk

For more information about the Dentists' Health Support Trust call 020 7224 4671 or visit www.dentistshealthsupporttrust.org