Accolades key to driving advancement

The Association of Dental Groups (ADG) is a keen advocate for education and professional development, and encourages any dental professional with an inclination to go above and beyond the call of duty to capitalise on all available opportunities.

For undergraduate and postgraduate students, the ADG itself offers the chance for dentists and dental professionals to consider new strategies and expand their skillset whilst earning national recognition through its Bursary Awards. Such an opportunity, the ADG hopes, will help to drive advancement in the profession and motivate young professionals to review the delivery of patient care.

There are three classifications in the 2018 edition of the Awards: undergraduate 'Professionalism', undergraduate 'Innovation in Dentistry', and the postgraduate category, with a range of cash and editorial prizes up for grabs. The final deadline for submissions is the 30th June, with the winners being notified on 1st September.

Professional development is key to driving advancement in dentistry – for more information about academic achievements available to undergraduate and postgraduate students, contact the ADG.
