Applications now open!

Following the success of the 2015 Bursary Awards, the Association of Dental Groups (ADG) would like to announce that applications for the 2016 Undergraduate Bursary Awards are now open.

Each year, ADG seeks to find the most innovative and inspirational voluntary projects from young dental professionals in the UK through its annual Bursary competition. The Undergraduate Bursary Awards are open to all undergraduate students and are a fantastic opportunity for the next generation of dental professionals to stand out from the crowd.

Entries are judged anonymously by an expert panel, with three prizes awarded in each category, and the gold winning applicants each receiving £1,000.

Amardeep Singh Dhadwal won the 2015 Undergraduate (Professionalism) gold award. He says: "I would definitely recommend other students to enter the competition next year; it is a great opportunity to discuss and consider what dentistry means to you and what you aspire to as a dental professional."

Applications for the 2016 Bursary Award are now open and entries can be completed using the forms available via the ADG website.
